CFV 125

CRITICAL FILTRATION VACUUM 125

Compact and portable,
with uncompromised HEPA filtration

The CFV 125 from Tornado proves that power and performance need not be sacrificed for portability and ease of operation. Four-stage HEPA filtration takes debris recovery to new levels for situations where the containment of recovered debris is critical. The CFV 125 is excellent for applications ranging from health care and educational to industrial sanitation, as well as environmental testing. It is intended for dry recovery. Dry debris is often misted to aid in containment. The CFV 125 can handle this application but is not appropriate for true wet recovery.

With a 1.1 HP motor, 80" waterlift, and 7.4 gallon tank, the CFV 125 is a powerful performer in a truly compact package. Four swivel casters, low weight, and lift-grip handle provide ease of transport, while the stainless steel tank stands up to the harsh applications for which the unit was designed. A bumper guard protects surroundings such as walls, machinery, and fixtures. 1.5" attachments (see below) are recommended for this unit and are available separately.

Efficient

A manometer filter gauge tells the user when a filter requires inspection. This ensures filter integrity while the CFV 125 is in operation, allowing the unit to function at optimal efficiency.

Ease of operation

The filters can be changed and the debris emptied by removing the vacuum head from the tank. Spring steel latches hold the vacuum head in place on the tank for a positive seal.

Four-stage HEPA filtration

The paper filter collection bag (A), primary paper filter (B), Dacron filter (C), and main HEPA filter (D) comprise a four-stage filtration process for the CFV 125.
